

First-tier Tribunal Property Chamber (Residential Property)

Guidance on Recognition of Tenants' Association General information about the process

This guidance is intended to help parties understand what happens when taking part in an application under section 29 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 to the First-tier Tribunal (Property Chamber) for a certificate of recognition of a tenants' association. Such an application is usually made where a landlord has refused recognition or has withdrawn a recognition formerly given (see further below). For advice on how to present your case, or if you need to understand more about the law, you may wish to consult a Citizen's Advice Bureau, a solicitor or the Leasehold Advisory Service at www.lease.advice.org

We try to avoid using jargon but if there is anything about our procedures you do not understand please contact the regional office. The tribunal's procedures are governed by statutory regulations called the Tribunal Procedure (First-tier Tribunal) (Property Chamber) Rules 2013 which can be found on the internet.

Tribunal decisions will be published on the Justice website at www.justice.gov.uk/tribunals/residential-property unless a party makes a written request that this should not be done.

Who does what?

Tribunal members are appointed by the Lord Chancellor. There are two types of member:

- (a) the chairman, who will usually be a lawyer or surveyor, is responsible for the conduct of the case and writes the reasons for the tribunal's decision;
- (b) other members who may be lawyers, surveyors, other professional people or lay people.

When a tribunal is set up to consider the application, there may be two or three members including the chairman, although non-complex cases will usually be decided by a chairman sitting alone.

Case officers are the administrative staff who manage the process from start to finish and deal with correspondence. When an application is received, it is the case officer who will register the case and deal with the paperwork and correspondence until the parties have received the final decision. The case officers are able to speak to parties about the procedures relating to the application, but they cannot give legal advice.

Recognition of a Tenants' association

A recognised tenants' association is an association of 'qualifying tenants' of dwellings (whether with or without other tenants) which is recognised for the purposes of the service charge provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985. Recognition is either by a notice in writing given by the landlord to the secretary of the association or by a certificate granted by the tribunal.

A number of tenants are 'qualifying tenants' if each of them may be required, under the terms of his or her lease, to contribute to the same costs by way of a service charge. The service charge must be one which varies or may vary in whole or in part according to changes in the costs.

There is no statutory specification of the matters to which the tribunal is to give regard in giving or cancelling a certificate of recognition and each application will be considered on its merits.

In practice the tribunal will want to be satisfied that the constitution and rules of the association are fair and democratic and that it is independent of the landlord and, in the case of a company landlord, its employees. The tribunal will be concerned to see that the actual paid up membership of the association represents a substantial proportion (as a general rule not less than 60%) of the potential membership.

A certificate will usually be granted for a fixed period (usually for four years) and application can be made for its renewal. A certificate may be cancelled if the tribunal considers that for some reason the Association no longer merits recognition.

Applications

An application form must be completed by the applicant in almost all cases. Forms can be obtained from the website at www.justice.gov.uk/tribunals/residential-property, or if you do not have access to a computer, you can ask a case officer to send you a form.

Once an application is received, it will be checked by a case officer for completeness and the applicant will be sent an acknowledgement. A copy will be sent to the other party (the respondent) and any person the tribunal thinks might be affected by the application.

Paper determinations

The parties may request, or the tribunal may suggest, that the case can be dealt with by considering the written evidence and the parties' written representations only (without the need for an oral hearing). This is referred to as a paper determination. However, any party who so wishes has the right to request a hearing (see below for hearings). Most applications for a certificate are dealt with without a hearing unless there is a dispute as to the facts which cannot be resolved by correspondence. Once the tribunal's decision is made it will be sent to the parties in writing with reasons for the decision.

Case preparation

In cases where the issues are clearly identified, a tribunal chairman may issue written procedural directions requesting particular actions from one or both parties before the hearing. The procedural directions document will sometimes set out what the issues are and say when the parties need to send each other copies of documents. If a party or another person is going to say something to the tribunal at a hearing, he or she may be required to prepare a witness statement.

The hearing and decision

In London, oral hearings are held at the London office. In other regions, the oral hearing can take place in a hearing room at the regional office but will often take place at a venue as near to the property as is practical.

A party can speak for themselves or through a representative (whether professionally qualified or not). It is usually the applicant's responsibility to present his or her case first, but the tribunal chairman will provide guidance about the appropriate order of proceedings at the beginning of the hearing. Each party will be able to put relevant questions to the other party. The members of the tribunal will try to put people at their ease and will also ask some questions. If anything is unclear during the hearing, parties are encouraged to ask the tribunal for clarification.

The tribunal's decision will be made after the hearing and sent to the parties in writing as soon as possible and usually within six weeks.

Inspections

The tribunal may exceptionally inspect the property if requested by either party or if the tribunal considers it necessary. A visit is not usually considered necessary in this type of case.

Variation and postponement applications

Parties may ask the tribunal to vary the directions or to postpone a listed hearing. All such requests must be made in writing to the tribunal with full reasons and must be copied to the other parties. The tribunal is unlikely to postpone a hearing unless there are good reasons which have arisen since the hearing date was fixed. Even good reasons will require some kind of evidence in order to prove that an expensive postponement is justified.

Withdrawal

Most withdrawals are made by parties after a negotiated agreement. An applicant who wishes to withdraw all or part of their case must notify the tribunal and the other party in writing. If the other party has consented in writing, this must be included with the applicant's notice to the tribunal. The applicant's notice of withdrawal will not take effect until the tribunal consents to the withdrawal, and the tribunal may make directions or impose conditions on the withdrawal as it considers appropriate.

Costs

The tribunal does not usually award costs against the losing side. However, if a party does not comply with the procedural directions or otherwise behaves unreasonably in connection with the proceedings, there could be serious consequences. Firstly, the tribunal may decide to stop the application going ahead. Secondly, if one party has incurred costs as a result of (a) another party's failure to comply with directions or (b) another party's unreasonable behaviour, the tribunal may order the defaulting or unreasonable party to pay costs.

Parties should also check their lease for any liability to pay costs separately. Some leases allow a landlord to include costs incurred in connection with proceedings before a tribunal as part of a service charge. Section 20C of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 gives the tribunal power, on application by a tenant, to make an order to the effect that such costs are not to be treated as relevant costs to be taken into account in determining the amount of any service charge payable by the tenant or any other person(s) specified in the application. Following such an application, the tribunal will either refuse the request or make such order as it considers reasonable.

Special requirements

The tribunal seeks to make itself as accessible as possible to all parties. If you have a particular requirement, for example because of a disability or other need, please discuss this with the case officer when you make your application.

Use of emails

The following rules are designed to minimise the impact that emails can have on the efficient running of the Tribunal office. Parties who wish to use emails are requested to:

- prepare a letter to the Tribunal in Word format and attach it to the email (maximum of five pages - longer documents should be sent by post);
- as case officers are sometimes absent, always send or copy the email to the regional office email address;
- always copy any email to the other parties, either by email or by post, and confirm in the email/ letter that this has been done;
- always quote the reference number or case officer's name in the email.

Email chains, email 'conversations' about the case and bundles attached to emails will not be accepted.

Appeals and re-hearings

In most cases where a party does not agree with the decision of the tribunal and wants it to be changed, an appeal will have to be made to the Upper Tribunal. In that case, the first thing for that party to do is make an application to the tribunal for permission to appeal. The application for permission, which must be made within 28 days after the date when the written reasons for the decision were sent to the parties, must be in writing giving the reasons why the applicant believes the decision was wrong. The tribunal will then decide whether permission should be granted for the appeal to proceed. The parties will be notified of that decision in writing. A dissatisfied party will then be able to re-apply for permission direct to the Upper Tribunal.

If the tribunal realises that a clerical mistake has been made it can issue a correction certificate.

Finally, if for a reason beyond the tribunal's control, there has been a serious procedural error (for example, if the documents provided by one party were not seen by the tribunal) and the tribunal considers it to be in the interests of justice to do so, it can set aside its decision and re-determine the case. Any application to set aside on this basis should be made within 28 days after the decision was sent to the parties.

Case closure

Following either a withdrawal or determination of all applications (including any appeal), the tribunal will close its case file.
